Dear Terry,

Re: MARVEL COMICS PRESENTS #106.

Sam Kieth's Wolverine and Nightcrawler was quite a unique visual, with a battle-hungry Wolverine and an off-cover Nightcrawler trying to sustain him with arms and tail. Rating: A-

I liked the Ghost Rider & Dr. Strange cover even better. Ghost Rider with the spiked ball and chain in hand was very ominous. Rating: A.

There's not much I can say about the Wolverine and Nightcrawler feature, except that both the story and art were uninteresting. I'm not saying they were bad, just bland. I think that this feature's problem is that it wastes too much time. The first six chapters could have been accomplished in three or four. Rating: B-

Just as I was beginning to enjoy Tom Sutton's pencils, you had to take him away! Why? Well, I won't complain too much, because Scott Kolins was a nice replacement. This chapter has piqued my interest more as the mystery of the triangle markings deepens. Rating: B+.

The best installment this issue was definitely the conclusion to the Ghost Rider & Dr. Strange tale. I've enjoyed Rick Leonardi's pencils the whole way through, and Howard Mackie's scripting was very pleasing. Rick's version of Ghost Rider is probably one of the best I've seen. He's added a touch of his own to the character with the addition of eyebrows to the skull and the way he manipulates the flames around Ghost Rider's head. Rating: A.

Gabriel, Demon-Hunter: Well, the reign of the one-parters has ended!! With MCP #106, the record of the one-part tales being the best features each issue has been broken! Overall, the Gabriel feature was probably second best, so maybe we're seeing a rise to power by the multi-parters! Oh yeah, I liked Bret Blevins' art on this feature, and that's why I'll give it a B+.

Overall rating of MCP #106: (drum roll, please...) B+.

Dear Terry,

Issue #106 was a very good one...

1) Wolverine and Nightcrawler: Even as this story comes to a close in two chapters, I still find it the best feature in MCP. I hope Scott teams up with Gene and Al again, or maybe even Gene and Tom Palmer, the classic DRACULA team. "Male Bonding" has been consistently good, telling about Nightcrawler's past, with great all-out X-action. Overall grade: A+.

2) Young Gods: Being that this story is more than halfway done, I doubt it will get much better. I haven't liked it all that much, but it isn't that bad. The artwork by Scott Kolins was also well done, in place of Tom Sutton. Overall grade: B.

3) Ghost Rider/Dr. Strange: All I can say is that I hope the next Ghost Rider serial is better. This story wasn't one of Howard's best, but it had a good script. As for the artwork, it was good one issue, bad the next, etc. Thankfully, this issue's artwork was good, and I enjoyed Rick Leonardi's pencils. Final grade: A-.

4) Gabriel: Although I am the biggest Marvel horror fan that you could find, I wasn't too pleased with this story. Bret Blevins' artwork was nice, but I didn't really enjoy the script by Robert Campanella. Mainly, I'd like to clear this Devil business up. Through the years, we've seen many, but mainly it was Mephisto. Here, we have Satan. And, both Mephisto and Satan have been shown giving Ghosty his powers. What's the lowdown? Overall grade: B.

5) Wolverine Cover: I've seen better. B.

6) Ghost Rider/Dr. Strange: A.

Dear Terry,

I've been a fan of MARVEL COMICS PRESENTS for about two months now, but this is the first time I've actually written. I must say that I have been pleased with every issue that I have read thus far. I don't want to bore you, so I'll just get right down to it...

I'm writing about issue #106. Sam Kieth, you are great!! The way you draw the covers is really neat! This is one book that you can really judge by the cover.

Wolverine and Nightcrawler: Scott Lobdell, great job! The script has been quite good so far. Keep it up! Kelly, the coloring in this issue was outstanding! By the way, I'm a big fan of the new CAGE, as well. I've got every issue so far. Anyway, Al Williamson's inks add weight to Gene and Kelly's work. Gene, don't think I'm leaving you out. Keep up the good work, all of you. 2 Claws!

Ghost Rider and Dr. Strange: What can I say? The conclusion to this story was great. I'll start with Howard: I loved how you had Kevin confront his mom for the final time. Just yesterday, I bought HEARTS OF DARKNESS (with your signature on the cover). The story was excellent, not to mention the gatefold cover! Well, now back to this issue. Sam Kieth, my compliments to you again on another great cover! You really know how to take a character and exaggerate his appearance, don't you? Fred, your colors in the story really caught my attention! Mike, I love how you letter Ghost Rider's words. Jimmy and Rick, your work is really good, as well. Great job, all around. This one gets.....3 Claws!

Whoops! Steve Dutro, I'm very sorry that I left you out. Great lettering! The overall grade for this issue would be an A++!

Great job, all of you! As long as all of the issues are like #106, I'll be seeing you every two weeks. Bye!

Dear Terry and Mark,

I just got issue #106 of MCP, and here are my reviews of the covers and the stories:

Wolverine/Nightcrawler: This is probably Sam Kieth's best rendition of Wolvie yet. No doubt about it, Sam does a much better job with Wolverine's "new" costume. Grade: A+

Ghost Rider/Dr. Strange: Once again, Sam Kieth has drawn a fantastic Dr. Strange. However, Ghost Rider's body seemed "blockish." Grade: B+

Wolverine/Nightcrawler: At last, we find out the true reason Kurt was asked to return to Germany. This chapter of "Male Bonding" was the best yet. I just hope the rest of the X-Men never find out about Wolverine being beaten up by two clowns! The inclusion of the evil Nazi geneticist Amim Zola was a totally unexpected twist. Good job, Scott! Grade: A+

Young Gods: Toro, toro! Now, this is what I call an innovative storyline. Using zombie mall-shoppers, rogue farm equipment, and now an animated bull statue to fight our young heroes! Grade: A+

Ghost Rider/Dr. Strange: At last, the conclusion! I was glad to see Kevin confront his past and come to terms with it. I was also glad to see Ghost Rider giving the cultists their just desserts, especially on the fantastic two-page spread! Grade: A+

Gabriel the Devil-Hunter: I've never heard of this guy before, but it looks like he has a long history. The story was just above average, though. Grade: B+

Overall grade for MCP #106: A
